It's a good thing that Chloe Sims doesn't have a 9 to 5 job where she sits at a computer all day.

The Only Way Is Essex star wouldn't be able to get much done if this was the case after being told she wouldn't be able to sit on her derrière for two weeks if she has bottom implants.

On last night's episode of the ITV2 reality show, the 29-year-old model continued her quest to have the 'perfect' body by attending a doctor's consultation to find out more about the procedure.

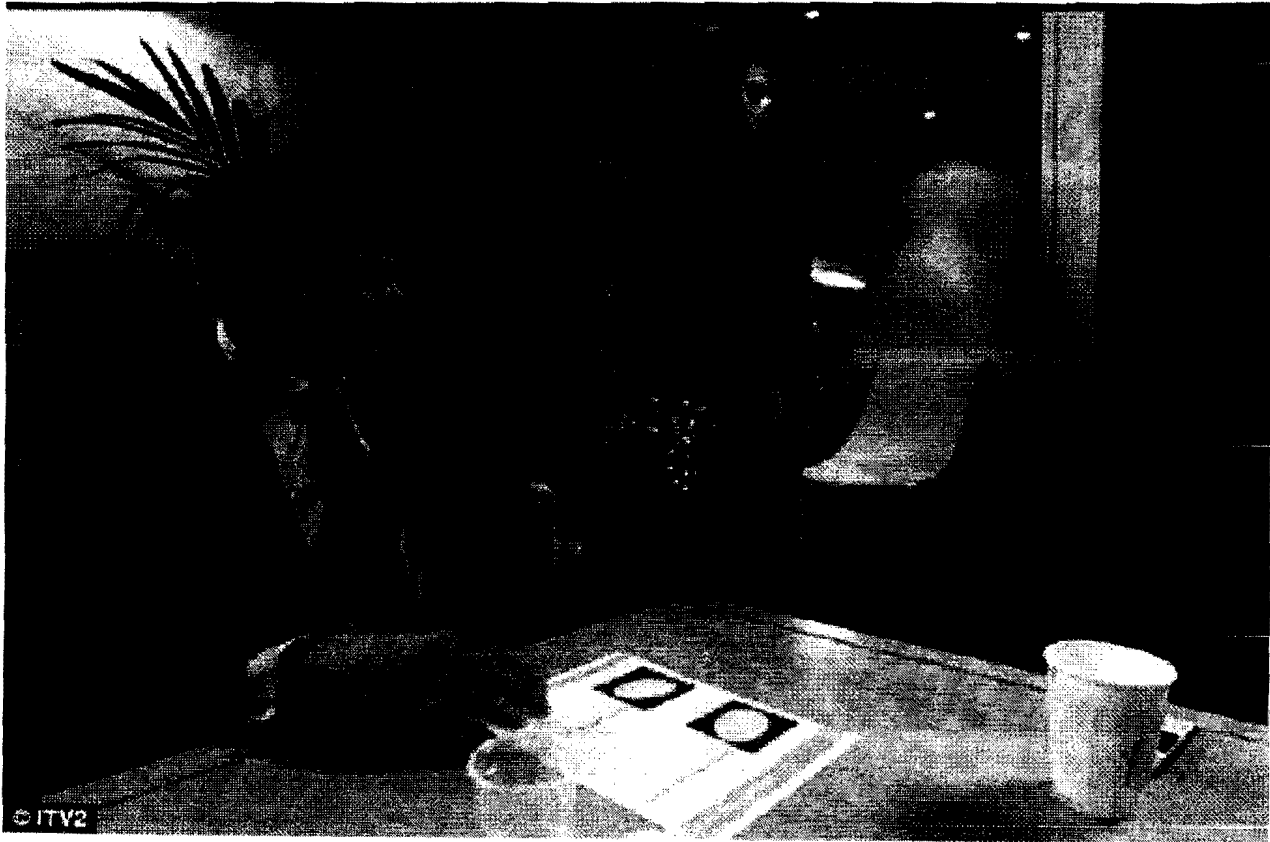

More surgery: The Only Way Is Essex star Chloe Sims visited a surgeon on last night's show to inquire about having buttocks implants

But the brunette didn't receive the news she was expecting.

Being a well-known fan of plastic surgery, Chloe is no stranger to post-operation recovery time but even she wasn't prepared for the surgeon told her.

Looking perplexed when she was told she won't be able to sit down for a fortnight if she had her bottom enhanced, she asked the surgeon, Dr Berry: 'So how do people sit?'

'I don't like my bum': The model showed Dr Berry what she didn't like about her bottom during the consultation

Stripping off: Chloe met with a 3D imaging specialist to show him exactly how she wanted her bottom to look like

To which he replied: 'They don't.'

The professional told Chloe that sitting down could risk displacing the implants, and that she would have to sleep on her side or on her front.

'That's bad because I've already got these in the way,' she said pointing to her enhanced 34EE bust.

The reality TV star went on to tell Dr Berry that she felt she has 'everything at the front but nothing at the back' and said she doesn't like her bottom.

My vision: The 29-year-old said she wanted her rear to 'lift up and come out a little bit'

And even though the surgeon told Chloe that she would be able to feel the implants inside her buttocks, when she sat down with another professional to discuss exactly what she wanted, she appeared to want the surgery even more.

Describing that she wants to 'lift it up and have it come out a little bit,' Chloe watched as a photograph of her rear was enhanced digitally on the screen.

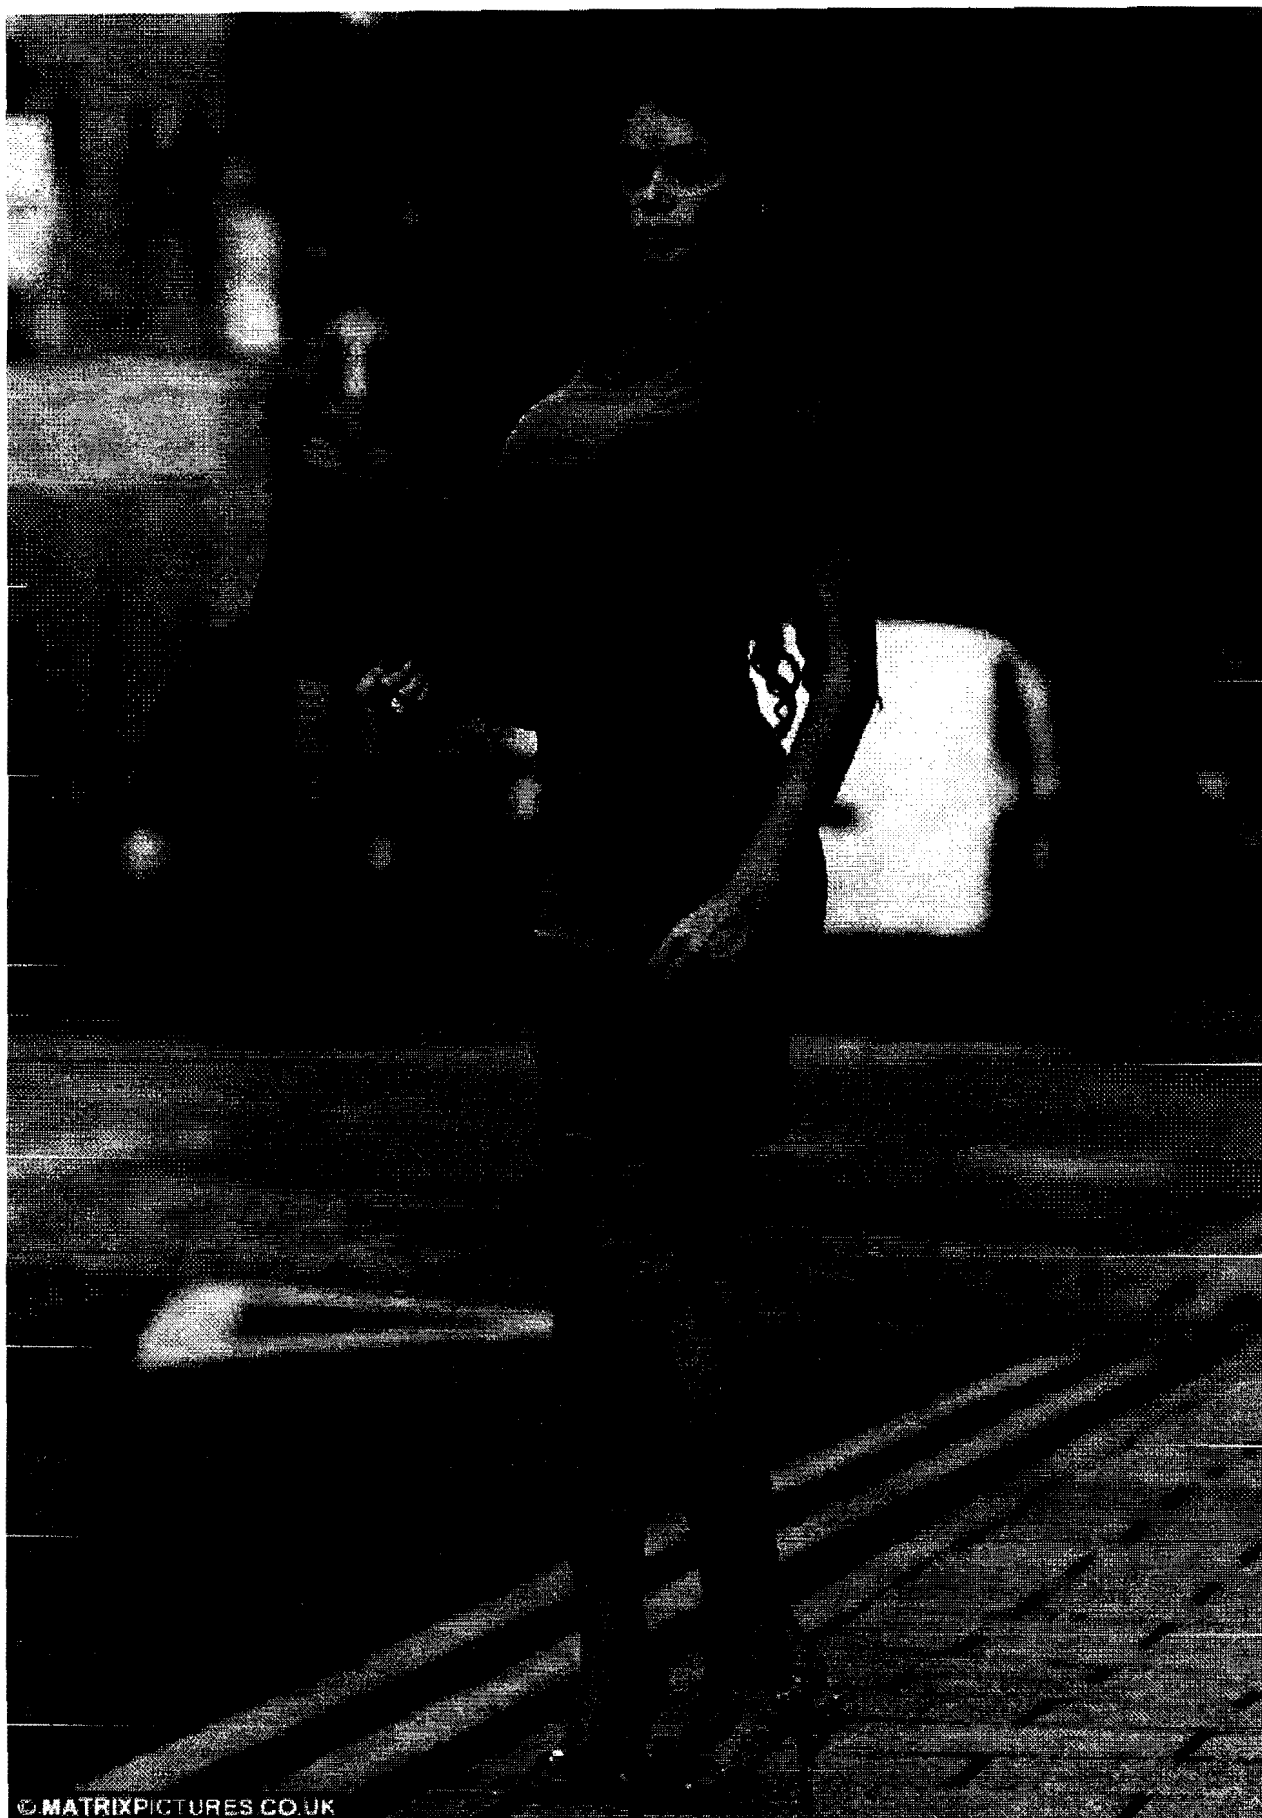

Before and after: The specialist showed Chloe what her future bottom could look like and she was pleased

But she was keen to ask if the changes that had been made were dramatic or subtle, and when the reply was no, she said: 'That looks so much better, I really want it done now.'

The single mother - who has had breast implants and surgery on her face - told her fellow TOWIE stars that she 'must have the flattest ae in Essex' and seemed obsessed with wearing underwear that enhances her derriere.

But although the professionals were keen to compare her latest body desire to singer Jennifer Lopez, the surgeon did tell her that he 'can improve her but doesn't want to ruin her'.
